

Pensions and employee benefit schemes in Guernsey

May 2017

Are you an employer? Or are you a trustee which administers pensions or employee benefit schemes?

When did you last review your pension and employee benefit arrangements?

Both employers and trustees have a duty to ensure that any pension or employee benefit scheme (set up by them for their employees or administered by them, as the case may be) is set up and run properly.

The nature of your duties will depend on whether you are an employer or a trustee, but the consequences for a breach of those duties could be serious in either case. The good news is that the risks are avoidable with the right attention to detail, an idea of issues to watch out for and by seeking appropriate legal advice where needed.

The work of our Pensions and Employee Benefits Practice Group over the last couple of years has seen a number of matters involving common problem areas which have needed to be dealt with, on behalf of trustees or employers, or both. These have ranged from simply updating trust documentation to take into account the changes in the tax regime applicable to pensions in Guernsey in 2015, for example, to some potentially serious breaches of the terms of the scheme documents, or even other applicable legislation.

We also regularly give more 'day to day' advice to trustees on their duties where they have been required to make a particular decision concerning a scheme, and also to employers and trustees setting up new schemes or restructuring existing ones.

Examples of our recent work include:

Pensions

- Preparing trust instruments and scheme rules for new pension schemes (including occupational pension schemes, international pension schemes, RATS and QNUPS) for a number of trustees, employers and individuals
- Consolidating and updating existing pension scheme documentation for various trustees and employers
- Preparing a simple guide to pension scheme documentation for the trustees of a pension scheme and an easy to follow flow charts explaining pensioners', deferred pensioners' and transferred staff members' entitlement to benefits under the pension scheme documentation
- Preparing documentation to retire and appoint trustees of various pension schemes
- Winding up defined benefit schemes and setting up new defined contribution schemes for various employers
- Advising a Guernsey employer on changing the trustee and administrator of its pension scheme
